PsycARTICLES Journal History

From 1997 when APA first offered its journals in an electronic database format, the association gradually digitized back volumes until the APA journals were available as far back as 1985. Then in 2006, APA completed a multi-year process to digitize APA journals in PsycARTICLES back to Volume 1, Issue 1. The oldest journal, Psychological Review, began in 1894.

Over time, journals evolved, titles changed, journals merged or broke apart. Consequently, it can be difficult to track the history of a title from Volume 1 to its current state. The chart below traces the journals from their inception to their present title. Note: The 5 APA journals that are not completely digitized were previously owned by other publishers.

Impact of the Digitization Project

- Digitizing to volume 1 for APA journals added nearly 73,000 full-text records to PsycARTICLES.
- Articles are in PDF format with XML metadata and references.
- Each additional full-text record in PsycARTICLES has a corresponding record in PsycINFO, complete with cited references. The project resulted in 15,000 new records and 74,000 new citations lists in PsycINFO.
- The expanded content comes free with annual site licenses or subscriptions to PsycARTICLES.
